THE AMERICAN ACADEMY OF ARTS & SCIENCES

Founded in 1780, the American Academy of Arts and Sciences is an international learned society composed of the world's leading scientists, scholars, artists, business people, and public leaders. With a current membership of 3,700 American Fellows and 600 Foreign Honorary Members, the Academy has four major goals:

- Promoting service and study through analysis of critical social and intellectual issues and the development of practical policy alternatives;
- Fostering public engagement and the exchange of ideas with meetings, conferences, and symposia bringing diverse perspectives to the examination of issues of common concern;
- Mentoring a new generation of scholars and thinkers through its Visiting Scholars Program;
- Honoring excellence by electing to membership men and women in a broad range of disciplines and professions.

The Academy's main headquarters are in Cambridge, Massachusetts.

THE COMMITTEE ON INTERNATIONAL SECURITY STUDIES

The Academy's Committee on International Security Studies (CISS), founded in 1982, plans and sponsors multi-disciplinary studies of current and emerging challenges to global peace and security. Recent and ongoing CISS projects examine: the governance of outer space, the global security implications of joint missile surveillance, international security relationships in the post-Soviet space, the implications of the International Criminal Court for US national security, and the global diffusion of light weapons to areas of conflict.

Recent CISS publications include:

War with Iraq: Costs, Consequences, and Alternatives, by Carl Kaysen, Steven E. Miller, Martin B. Malin, William D. Nordhaus, and John D. Steinbruner (2002).

The Significance of Joint Missile Surveillance, by John D. Steinbruner (2001).

The United States and the International Criminal Court, edited by Sarah Sewall and Carl Kaysen (2000).

Light Weapons and Civil Conflict, edited by Jeffrey Boutwell and Michael T. Klare (1999).

To order publications or for more information, please contact CISS at the American Academy of Arts & Sciences, 136 Irving Street, Cambridge, MA 02138.
